INDEX.

Types of Mankind, 1; Ethnology and Revelation, ib.; unfair treatment of Moses, 3; difficulties, ib.; eagerness to discover objections, 5; historical researches, 7; Egypt, ib.; conjectures of Egyptiologists, 9; no stand-point for the new chronology, 11; human origin, 13; the present work described, ib.; contradictions of scepticism on man's origin, 15; rash conclusions, 17; false reasonings, ib.; philology, 19; Coptic language, &c., ib.; chronology, 21; Lepsius and Bunsen, ib.; no foundation for a new chronology, 23; human varieties, their origination, 25; geology and paleontology, 27; human fossils, ib.; theory of numerous creations, 29; acts of creation, 31; miracles, ib.; creative laws, ib.; creation and miracle, 33; alternatives for the Polygenesians, 35; Dr. Prichard vindicated, 37; Prichard on the authenticity of Genesis, 39; examination of the tenth chapter of Genesis, 41; critical contradictions, 43; conclusion, ib.

The Know-nothings—American Prospects, 45; slavery in the United States, 47; present state of parties, 49; progress of immigration, 51; power from immigration, 53; American arrogance, 55; American grievances, 57; Jesuitism, ib.; depravity in great cities, 59; communism, 61; domestic demoralization, 63; infidelity and pleas of conscience, 65; Jesuitism assails the public schools, 67; position of Christianity in the United States, 69; the new party, should resist, but not encroach, 71; the Know-nothings and Christianity, 73; Celtism, Saxonism, Slavonism, 75.

The Works of Dr. Thomas Young—Young's genius and writings, 77; character of the memoir, 79; early studies in science, 81; first scientific essay, 83; turns his back on George Fox, 85; lectures at the Royal Institution, 87; rival theories of light, 89; Newton's fits of easy transmission, 91; Grimaldi's fringes, 93; Brougham's onslaught, 95; siege of the Rosetta Stone, 97; letter from the camp, 99; Ptolemy's cartouche, 101; Champollion le Jeune, 103; national controversy on hieroglyphics, 105; Young's minor labours, 107; his singular sagacity, 109.

The Insurgent Power in China, 110; geography of China, 111; present questions, ib.; causes of the revolution, 115; alleged cruelty of the insurgents examined, 119; religion of the insurgents, its errors, 121; its truths, 131; the future of China, 139; British policy, ib.; China and Christian missions, 143.

Administrative Reform, 145; Lord John Russell and the Earl of Derby; Huskisson, Herries, 149; science of administration, 151; hand-to-mouth system of statesmanship, 153; bureaucracy of the cabinet, 155; constitutional government and absolutism, 157; reform the cabinet before the clerks, 159; patronage, 161; Buonaparte, Thiers, 163; patronage, 165; Mr. Henry Taylor, ib.; Sir J. Stephen, ib.; competitive examinations, 167; civil service college, 169; ordnance survey, ib.; government slow to move on this question, 171.

Life of the Rev. Sydney Smith, 172; merits of the memoir, 173; the 'Edinburgh Review,' 175; life at Foston le Clay, 177; materia medica, 179; his capacity for business, 181; his preaching at St. Paul's, 183; kindly character of his wit, 185; position in the church, 187; his estimate of evangelical religion, 189; his estimate of the establishment, 191; simplicity of style, 193; varieties of wit, 195; rapidity and ease of his satiric touches, 197; the parable, 199; Charles Lamb, ib.

Russian Aggression and British Statesmanship, 201; Russia under the first Romanoffs, 203; Russian appetite for conquest, 204; aggressions of Peter I., 207; aggressions of the last ninety years, 209; true view of the present war, 215; aggressive tendency still active, 217; character of the aggressive 'system,' 221; Britain's interest in interfering, 223; chance of an invasion in India, 225; the Peace party, 227; the 'Four Points' negotiations, 229; war policy of the Allies, 131; true war policy, 235; Poland, 237.

EPILOGUE.

245—315.

LITERATURE.

Memoirs of Sheil, 245.
Buckingham Memoirs, 249.
Wine—its Uses and Taxation, 251.
Military Forces of Great Britain, 254.
Butler's Adventures in Assam, 255.
Metcalfe Papers, 257.
Congreve's Roman Empire, 258.
Buckingham's Autobiography, 259.
Arvon; or, the Trials, 259.
Kingsley's Westward Ho! 259.
Wrightson's Modern Italy, 261.
Chassaud's Druses of Lebanon, 261.
Sisters of Charity, 262.
Lives of Nicholas Ferrar, 262.
The Hero's Canticle, 263.
Poems by Matthew Arnold, 264.
Ethel; or, the Double Error, 265.
The Madan Chief, 265.
A Poet's Children, 266.
Songs of the Present, 266.
Dream of Pythagoras, 266.
Morbida, and other Poems, 266.
The Golden Age, 266.
Lays and Lyrics, 266.
Abont's Tolla, 266.
Lamartine's History of Turkey, 267.
Goncourt on the French Directory, 267.
Villemain's Memoirs, 268.
Capefigue on Finance, &c., 269.
Véron's Memoirs, 271.
Dupin's Memoirs, 272.
Grimm's German Mythology, 273.
Attractive Flowers, 274.
Ziegler's Travels in the East, 275.
Universal Histories, 276.
Lübker's Classical Dictionary, 276.
Life of Baron Stein, 277.
Philosophical Journal, 277.

ART.

Life of Etty, 282.
Velazquez and his Works, 286.
Salvator Rosa and his Times, 288.

SCIENCE.

Liebig's Agricultural Chemistry, 293.
Dodd's Philosophy of Language, 294.
Fibrous Plants of India, 295.
Taylor's Facts and Fictions, 295.
Bailey's Philosophy of the Mind, 298.
Kingsley's Glaucus, 299.
The War Controversy, 299.
Gymnastics for Ladies, 301.
Microscopic Pictures, 301.

THEOLOGY.

Thrupp's Ancient Jerusalem, 302.
Ellicott's Epistle to Galatians, 303.
Life of Kinghorn, 304.
Hare's Vindication of Luther, 304.
Wish on the First Cause, 304.
Letters of Calvin, 305.
Memoir of Scholefield, 305.
Marsden's Churches and Sects, 305.
Modern Jesuitism, 306.
Drion's French Protestants, 306.
Ewald on Job, &c. &c., 307.
Schegg on the Latter Prophets, 307.
Meier on the Song of Solomon, 308.
Knobel on Isaiah, 309.
Dillmann on the Book of Enoch, 309.
De Wette on the Revelations, 310.
Lekebusch on the Acts, 311.
Canonical Literature, 312.
Denzinger on Symbols of Belief, 314.
Chrissmann's Rule of Catholic Faith, 314.
Tischendorf's New Testament, 314.
Meyer's Exegetical Manual, 315.
Huther's Exegetical Manual, 315.

Sir Isaac Newton—Newton's biographer, 319; Newton the boy, 321; Newton the farmer and grazier, 323; how he dissected a sunbeam, 325; Newton the explorer of the universe, 327; the Principia, 329; the fluxionary battle, 331; Newton the lunatic, 333; the dog Diamond, 337; Newton the wooer, 339; the Flamsteed controversy, 341; Newton the thinker, 343; the child playing on the beach, 345.

The War in Asia—Climate of Armenia, 347; Kars, the Greek, Armenian, and Turk, 349; Turkish villagers, 351; trade and servility, Russian policy, 353; Armenian distrust of Russia—the Turkish army, 355; the Bashi-Bazooks, 357; the campaign, 359; battle of Kurekdere, 361; design of Russia in Asiatic Turkey, 363; British India—the northern Moloch, 365; the resisting and non-resisting—the contingent, 367.

Edmund Spenser, his Life and Poetry—his birth, his probable family connexions, 369; scenes of infancy and boyhood, 371; old London, her festivals and domestic usages, 373; his studies at Cambridge, his friends, 375; 'gentle Mistress Rosalind,' who was she? 377; his sojourn at Penshurst, the 'Shepheard's Calendar,' 379; correspondence with Gabriel Harvey, 381; Harvey's second letter, his judgment on the Faerie Queen, 383; feud between Leicester and Burghley, 385; Mother Hubbard's tale, its political allusions, 387; Burghley's letter, grant of land to Spenser, 389; his residence in Ireland, visit of Raleigh, 391; his return to Ireland, a new love, 393; his marriage—his Epithalamion, 395; his visit to London, tribute to Essex, 397; rising of the rebels; his flight to London; his death, 399; the Faerie Queen, its allegorical character, 401; the Faerie Queen, second and third books, 403; Faerie Queen, fourth and fifth books, 405; the Faerie Queen, conclusion, 407; his moral purpose; his descriptive powers, 409; his natural pride; his deep religious feeling, 411.

Lands of the Slave and the Free—the author, 413; palmam qui meruit ferat, 415; American railways, 417; adventure on the Mississippi, 419; Mrs. Stowe and Abolitionists, 421; education, 423; English items, 425; England and America, 427.

Paris in 1855—Paris and its attractions for a century, 429; Louis Philippe, 1845—opportunities lost, 431; Paris in 1682 and 1855, 433; Boulogne in 1825 and 1855, 435; la Reine, la Reine, encore la Reine, 437; instability of the French, 439; popularity of the Queen, 441; French and English industry, 443; Paris brick and mortar and Paris intellectual, 445; monster tables-d'hôte, 447; review in the Champ de Mars, 449; Pitt, Fox, Canning, Wellington, and Grey, 451; reasons for her Majesty's journey—its success, 453.

The Christ of History—His social position, shortness of his career, 457; a spiritual kingdom, doctrine concerning the soul, 459; the Fatherhood of God, 461; heathendom, Socrates, 463; the spiritual individuality of Christ, 465.

Maud and other Poems—the story of the poem, 469–478; close of the poem, 479; Tennyson's lyrical tendency, 481; merits of description, 483; merits of thought and composition, 485; peculiarities of versification, 487–490; work of Maud as a poem for the time, 491; doctrine of the poem, 493–498.

War policy of Great Britain—effects of war—the other side, 501; Great Britain not insular, 502; principles of offensive warfare, 505; wars of Henry VIII. and Elizabeth, 507; wars of the Stuarts and Cromwell, 509; wars of Anne and the two first Georges, 511; evils of Hanoverian influence, 513; objects of the French war of 1793, 515; the Napoleonic war—its objects and mistakes, 517; Congress of Vienna—Russian encroachment, 519; interests involved in the present contest, 521; parliamentary querists, 523; just wars ought to be profitable, 525; puny efforts of ministers, 527; naval limitation and counterpoise, 529; compensation the only road to security, 531; petty means adapted to petty ends, 533; use to be made of Persia, 535; Poland not the nursery of revolutions, 537; can Poland, once on its legs, stand, 539; Prussian and Austrian interests in Poland, 541; Germany not averse to Polish freedom, 543.

EPILOGUE.

549—612.

LITERATURE.

Howitt's Two Years in Victoria, 549.
Helps' Spanish Conquests, 552.
Seymour's Black Sea and Sea of Azoff, 554.
Kenrick's Phœnicia, 558.
White's Walk to the Land's End, 559.
Allen's Dead Sea, 560.
Explorations in Texas, 561.
Memorials of Charles James Fox, 562.
Cornwall's Early Roman History, 563.
Holden's Colony of Natal, 564.
Robertson's Few Months in America, 565.
Bazancourt's Campaign in the Crimea, 567.
Lamartine's Russia, 567.
Regnault's Danubian Principalities, 568.
Foreign Troops in French Service, 569.
Memoirs of the Marquis Dangeau, 569.
Barante's History of the Directory, 569.
Gervinus's History of the Nineteenth Century, 570.
Bentley's Sanscrit Grammar, 571.
Religion of Mythology, 572.
The Oji Language, 573.

ART.

Memoirs of Sir Robert Strange, 575.
Brick and Marble in the Middle Age, 581.
Pecht's Sketch-book, 582.
Braun's Mythology, 583.
Tobler's Jerusalem, 583.

SCIENCE.

Dawson's Acadian Geology, 586.
The Senses and the Intellect, 589.
Reid's Forest Exiles, 591.
Taggart on Locke's Writings, 592.
Law of Nature and Nations, 594.
Jennings's Political Economy, 595.
Spencer's Psychology, 596.
Noble's Physiological Medicine, 598.

THEOLOGY.

Tulloch's Theism, 599.
Eccles. Hist. of New England, 601.
Westcott's Canon of the New Testament, 602.
Greek Testament by Webster and Wilkinson, 603.
Winkworth's Lyra Germanica, 604.
Ragg's Creation's Testimony, 605.
The Liberator, 605.
Dorner on the Person of Christ, 605.
Aubertin on Daniel, 606.
Paulus and his Times, 607.
Trussen's Manners of the Hebrews, 608.
Herzfeld's History of Israel, 609.
Translation of the Pentateuch, 610.
Deickoff on the Lord's Supper, 610.
New Testament in Four Languages, 611.
Ruthgeber's Writings, 612.

Savill & Edwards, Printers, Chandos Street, Covent Garden.